In this section we have seen the importance of using a range of ways to build a full picture of a particular sector or role and how it might fit with your career priorities. To help you take advantage of the right kind of information out there you will need to:

- Use a variety of resources to build your knowledge of the industry, sector, role you are interested in
- Consider what the information tells you in terms of how the opportunities are relevant to you, and match to your priorities (or “shopping list”)
- Ask the right sorts of questions to check that the information presented is valid and presents a true picture of the industry, sector or role

Having knowledge of the different career options is essential for you to be able to make the right career choices. The tasks that you have completed in this section will be a useful starting point, but look out for further sources of information and networks as they present themselves.
